

How accurate can predictions be?

How accurate can predictions become? 24th March, Copenhagen

A Danish business paper asked in the middle of 2007 some financial experts to give a qualified guess about the future situation in the stock markets in 2008.

They all predicted that the development would be an increase &ndash; at least slightly in 2008.

As we all know it turned out differently with a fall at about 25% in the stock markets. How could they be so wrong with this prediction &ndash; they were well established experts with long experience of economy?

In 2003 &ldquo;The Mayan Calendar and the Transformation of Consciousness&rdquo; was published &ndash; written by the Swede Carl Johan Calleman who for years has been studying this prophetic calendar. In Calleman's interpretation of the Mayan Calendar he tells about the period January 1999 &ndash; October 2011 and calls this &ldquo;The Galactic period&rdquo;. According to this period it will be a very dualistic period with a confrontation between the thinking in East and in West. There will possibly be an ongoing military confrontation as well. It will also be a period with expansion in new technology. The period is also about healing and spirituality &ndash; the rediscovery of the spirit of Man.

This prophetic spiritual calendar is created by the Mayans more than a thousand years ago, and seems to describe a kind of what could be called &ldquo;training program for Humanity&rdquo;. It places a lot of very important events in our history in their mathematical positions in the calendar, and explains why they took place at the time they actually did.

According to the Calendar the period November 2007 to November 2008 is a very special period.

This year

is a kind of 'wakeup call'; for those who have not realised the blowing of new winds – the change into other values. Some people would call this change a move from the more egotistic solar plexus to the loving and caring heart. Calleman predicts in his book that we will probably see a kind of breakdown for world economy in this year – well! Isn't that what we are actually seeing right now?

So how accurate can predictions be? Pretty accurate – but we need to look for them in the right places, it seems. Maybe it is correct that the main crisis we have is a spiritual crisis. That we have forgotten or lost our connection to the spirit, and still believe that it is possible to stick to materialistic values in the this 'Galactic period' of time.

What I find interesting is, that it seems as if the Mayan Calendar is correct, and if so, the predictions further out in the future could be true too also! Well, the calendar seems to end in 2011 or 2012 with a kind of collective breakthrough for the human mind. I do not know for sure what this means – I guess it will be about the rediscovery of the personal contact to the spirit. Where will that take us? Good question! Most of us will probably let go of materialistic values and take responsibility for our brother next door. That will lead to a change of how we look at money, and how we arrange our financial systems. It may also stop wars at least the way we know them, etc. It seems almost impossible to imagine that kind of world, and especially that the breakthrough may take place in 2011 or 2012 – the realization may take a longer timer afterwards.

And still it leaves me with the thought that if the rest of the calendar's predictions are also true, we may face a Golden Age again&hellip;.