

2012 Apocalypse or opportunity?

2012 Apocalypse or opportunity - July 24th

I am watching the dry landscape of Cyprus from my room at the top floor of the hotel and relaxing a little after four weeks of teaching our Summer Training. It has been wonderful to be part of so much personal transformation in such a short a time. I am positively surprised every time and like watching so much energy and so many personal resources become released and available for a better purpose.

I have just watched the trailer for "2012" - the disaster movie predicting a big change on this planet.

This is really a disaster movie and the trailer has got 640 millions hit this year. So there is a lot of interest I would say. Is there any truth behind this or is it just another movie? We don't know the answer before December 21st 2012!

However looking into 2012 on Google.com you may find a variety of different opinions to what will be going on that year. There is an ancient principle saying: "You get what you focus on". It seems as if more and more people will be focusing on this topic for the next couple of years and if we focus on that - something is really going to happen.

Question is will it be Apocalypse - the end of Earth or will it be a breakthrough for human consciousness - the creation on a new golden age? The answer to that question will not be known until the day - or maybe more possibly: The following years - and will depend on our focus - we get what we focus on!

When I look into the Mayan Calendar we can see that it is predicted to end at that day in 2012 and the special thing about that calendar is that it seems to describe a kind of "training program for humanity". If that is true then December 2012 could in my mind be the day of graduation - if we pass our examination. The examination could be that we let go of fear and by focusing on a better world actually get what we focus on. However this will take a lot of people to start doing that.

Something is going to happen for sure - I have found a kind of description from another source (www.greatdreams.com/2012.)

explaining the astronomy/astrology at that day:

On the winter
solstice of 2012, the noonday Sun exactly conjuncts
the crossing point of the sun's ecliptic with the galactic plane, while also closely conjuncting the exact the center of the galaxy.

This should take place only every 26.000 years – some people mean that this will create a kind of opening – a gate to something else. If that is true why should we not take that opportunity to explore something new. It may take a long time for the next opportunity.
